SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Superintending School Committee for the town of Bristol, submits the following report for the year ending March, 1864 :

The sum raised by town tax the past year for the support of district schools was $558 00. The amount of income from the local fund was $45 00. The amount apportioned from the avails of the Literary Fund was $88 00, and the amount of railroad tax for the support of schools was $33 00, in all, amounting to $724.

The whole number of scholars in town, four years of age and upward, who have attended the district schools two or more weeks during the year is 304—151 boys and 153 girls.

The schools, during the past year, with scarcely an exception, have been prosperous and well conducted. The work has been wholly performed by female teachers, no male teachers having been employed during the year. The following is a report of the several districts :

DISTRICT No. 1.

A summer term was taught by Miss M. Jennie Curtice, of Camp-ton. The children seemed eager for knowledge, and were aided in their efforts by a kind and faithful teacher. In some instances the improvement was very rapid. The district seemed to fear too much of a good thing, and the school was dismissed at the close of eight weeks. When scholars seem so anxious to learn, they ought to have more than eight weeks of the fifty-two-for attending school.

DISTRICT No. 2.

The Summer and Fall Term was taught by Miss Helen M. Locke, of East Concord. This has been considered a hard school, but under the management of Miss Locke it was a good school. Some of the scholars who could bear no restraint, left during the first term, thereby increasing the quiet and prosperity of the school. The order in school was good for so large a number of small scholars, and the progress creditable, alike to teacher and pupils. A decided improvement was manifested during the second term, and the examination, at its close, showed the teacher had been faithful, and the scholars had profited by her instructions. The damage to the school-house, by fire, prevented a third term by the same teacher.

DISTRICT No. 3.

A full term was taught by Miss Julia A. E. Wallace, of New Hampton. This was among the best schools in town. The discipline was good, and the progress in study thorough. Twelve weeks is a short term of schooling for twelve months, but the scholars of the district seemed not in the least behind those of other districts where more than one term is enjoyed.

DISTRICT No. 4.

The Summer and Winter Term was taught by Miss M. Angie Yeaton, of New Hampton. The teacher gave herself faithfully to the improvement and advancement of her scholars, and with good success. Improvement was plainly manifest during the second term. The closing examination of the school was prevented by the sickness and death of one of the scholars.

DISTRICT NO. 5.

The Winter term was taught by Miss Jane Rolfe Moor, of Bristol, and was a model school. The discipline was kind and firm, and the instruction thorough in every respect. No other school has shown so good a knowledge of the elementary sounds of the letters, or applied them better in the pronunciation of words. Were these children educated with the same thoroughness they have been the past winter, they could not fail of making the best scholars. The recitation of Scripture and other exercises at the close of the school were creditable alike to teacher and scholars.

DISTRICT NO. 6.

The Summer and Winter Term was taught by Miss Anna B. Cheney, of Bristol. This was another of our best schools. Miss Cheney has the faculty to interest her scholars in their studies, and the ability to have the best discipline in school. Her school was an example of both. The discipline was good and the advancement uniform. There seemed a steady increase of interest during both terms. Some of the best scholars in town, for their age, are found in this school.

DISTRICT NO. 7.

The winter term of sixteen weeks was taught by Miss Mary E. Patten, of Alexandria. This was her first experience as a teacher, and in regard to her school it might well be said of her as of another Mary, "She hath done what she could." The school, composed of small scholars, under her instruction, made rapid and thorough progress in the elementary branches. Some of the scholars particularly excelled in geography. The teacher's heart was in the work, and it was a prosperous and profitable term. No money was thrown away in this district in supporting this school.

DISTRICT No. 8.

The Fall Term of eight weeks was taught by Miss A. E. Crawford, of Alexandria. This school was well conducted, and was a pleasant and profitable school. The quick, ready replies of the scholars showed they were accustomed to think for themselves and not merely to commit to memory. In no other school in town have we found better classes in primary and mental arithmetic. A good school is a permanent good and such was this one.

DISTRICT No. 9.

The Summer and Winter term was taught by Miss M. J. W. Chase, of Bristol. The Summer term was prosperous, and rapid improvement was made on the part of some of the pupils. Had the discipline been more strict the school would have been better. The Winter term commenced prosperously and continued so till near its close, when several of the larger scholars left the school. They brought no complaint against the teacher, and the first notice the Superintendent had of any trouble, was a request from the teacher herself that he would visit the school and learn if there was just cause for trouble. I could find no real ground for complaint then, and have been unable to since, even after careful conversation with those who were dissatisfied. The trouble seemed to grow out of former prejudices existing in the district, rather than from any present wrong in the school. If a teacher fails in her duties, or ill uses her pupils, it should be reported to the town Superintendent. The ground for complaint would be at once investigated, and if the charges were sustained the teacher would be dismissed. This is the proper way for proceeding in case of trouble in school. But when scholars become dissatisfied with a teacher in the proper discharge of her duties and without bringing any real charges against her are permitted by their parents to leave the school, it cannot be otherwise than injurious to the district, and especially to the scholars who learn. The greatest injury necessarily results to themselves. Miss Chase continued her school till the close of the term. The closing exercises satisfactorily showed that those who remained and attended to study had found it a profitable term.

DISTRICT No. 10.

The Summer term was taught by Miss A. E. Crawford, of Alexandria. She entered on her labors after the school had been taught two weeks by a substitute who then returned home. Entering the school under these disadvantages Miss Crawford soon succeeded in establishing order and discipline, and the school continued prosperously till its close. For so large a school averaging forty scholars, mostly small children, the order was good and the improvement as great as could be expected. The Fall and Winter term of this school was taught by Miss Mary F. Fellows, of Bristol. Miss Fellows had much experience as a teacher and was well recommended, but the school did not prosper under her care so well as was expected. The discipline was at times good, but was not uniform, and the closing examination did not give proof of great advancement. We know this is a hard school, and all due allowance should be made. By her report the Fall term numbered sixty-seven scholars, while the average attendance was but twenty-six. The Winter term numbered fifty-two scholars, average attendance, thirty-three. This shows there was lack of interest somewhere.

DISTRICT No. 11.

The Summer Term was taught by Miss Sara M. C. Musgrove, of Bristol. This was another of our model schools. Discipline good, instruction faithful, thorough and energetic. The pupils made rapid advancement during the short term of eight weeks. The closing exercises were interesting and creditable alike to teacher and scholars. The Winter Term of this school was taught by Miss Sarah C. Moor, of Bristol. The school appeared well at its commencement. As I was not notified of the time it closed, and on this account failed to be present, I am not able to speak of the improvement which was made. Becoming acquainted as I have with your schools during the past year, several facts have come before me which I will mention here

One fact is, that in those schools out of the village the order has been better, and the standard of scholarship higher, than in the village schools. Still the scholars in the village as a general thing have the opportunity of attending school twice as many days during the year as many of those out. That is the reason for this difference. Is it not found in the fact that in our two largest village schools, so many scholars of different ages and attainments are crowded together and form so many different classes, that none of them can be very much benefitted by the labors of the most faithful teacher. Would it not be far better for the educational interests of the village, should the three districts unite and form one graded school of two or more departments, where scholars of equal attainments could pursue the same studies, more successfully and quietly. Other towns have found it far better and more economical to support such schools, and we trust this community is fast coming to the same conclusion.

A second fact we have noticed is that when the same teacher is employed the second term, the school has usually been an improvement on the first term. They have learned their scholars' their work; and can accomplish much more the second than the first term. Let Prudential Committees secure, if possible, the same teacher for the second and third term, if she has been faithful and trustworthy the first.

Another fact I have clearly felt is, that if we would have able and prosperous schools we must employ only the best teachers.—Too many teachers are still employed who are not fitted for their work. Give them a simple sentence and they cannot analyze it correctly. In writing, their sentences commence with small letters, and their spelling is often on an entirely different standard from either Webster or Worcester. Still such teachers are employed, and sent to the Superintending School Committee for a certificate and he is freely censured if it be refused. Let Prudential Committees seek the best teachers for their schools, and give preference to those who have proved themselves faithful and competent. We need the best minds to educate our children. And then let the parent aid the teacher in her work.

There was one excellent rule when I was a school boy, which seems now to have gone quite out of use. Then if a scholar was punished at school, if known, he received another punishment at home. The enforcement of this rule saved many cases of discipline at school, and much tale bearing out of school. If parents would adopt this rule, instead of pitying the punished child and blaming the teacher, they would be doing the child a far greater kindness, and aid the discipline of the teacher instead of destroying it.

Let parents, teachers, committees and voters, seek the best good of our district schools. They are thus effecting a lasting good for the community and the commonwealth.

Respectfully submitted,

C. F. ABBOTT, Supt. School Committee.
